

ABOUT US

The J.W. Fanning Institute for Leadership Development — a unit of the Office of Public Service and Outreach at the University of Georgia — is dedicated to strengthening communities through leadership development, training and education. Named for UGA's first vice president for services, Dr. J.W. Fanning, the Institute embodies his legacy in its dedication to developing leaders of all ages, in every community and from all walks of life.

The institute's multi-disciplinary faculty can assist communities and organizations by offering education, training and services that include:

- Community leadership development
- Nonprofit and professional association leadership development
- Youth leadership development
- Diversity, equity and inclusion

MISSION

Our mission is to strengthen individuals, communities, and organizations through leadership development, training and education.

VISION

We envision the state of Georgia as a network of vibrant, inclusive, and prosperous communities, where leaders of all ages and backgrounds are well trained and confident in their abilities to affect positive change. As an institute, we aspire to be a nationally recognized resource for communities and organizations seeking to develop existing and emerging leaders.
